

I hope you are having a blessed day.

Have you ever thought about what is most important to you? What is it that you begin to miss if it is taken away? As I go to work each day, as the day progresses, I begin to miss what is most important to me. I pray throughout talking to God, seeking his guidance. I begin to miss my family: My wife who treats me with the upmost respect. I think about Keenan who just wants to play with daddy, then my little princess, Rosalie, who gives daddy the best smiles ever. I never find myself missing my car or my 4 –wheeler at home. I do not find myself missing my house or that new suit that I may have bought. I find myself missing my family.

I have not met many people who say they miss those materialized things while they are away, but they usually miss their family or one that is extremely close them. With that said, then how come we so often find ourselves focused and spending more time on the materialized things rather than what we say is most important.

I encourage you; while you at work or school, when you find yourself missing what's important to you, make sure you go home and spend quality time with them.

“May God himself, the God of peace, sanctify you through and through. May your whole spirit, soul and body be kept blameless at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.”

(1 Thessalonians 5:23)

May God Bless You! Pastor Eric
